

Department of Chemistry, NEHU

North-Eastern Hill University (NEHU) is one of the pioneers in higher education in the North-Eastern Region of India and a destination for higher studies and research for National and International scholars. The Department of Chemistry, established in the 1976 to impart chemistry teaching and learning, is known worldwide for its contribution to the field of research. The Department is the proud recipient of various academic and research grants such as DST-COSIST, UGC-SAP-DSA, DST-FIST (II) and UGC-Centre for Advanced Studies.

CALL FOR PRESENTATION

Objectives of ACS-I

The aim and objective of Advances in Chemical Sciences-I (ACS-I), 2025 is to deliberate upon different fields related to the present chemical sciences and provides a platform for dialogues among the participants on advanced developments. This conference is expected to draw national participants with featuring talks by many renowned invited resource persons and scientists both from industry and academia on the recent developments in chemical sciences and related areas. It will also allow the university's young researchers to showcase their recent findings through oral or poster presentations. It also embarks upon exploration of meaningful collaboration among the participants to achieve shared objectives. It is expected that the conference results constitute a significant contribution to the updated knowledge in the field of chemical sciences.
