

Two Days Pre-service Teachers' Training Workshop on Curriculum Planning and Curriculum Reform

Under the MHRD Scheme of Pandit Madan Mohan Malviya National Mission on Teachers and Teaching

Introduction:

Education is a very important instrument that helps build not only an individual but the society as a whole. For the smooth functioning and a better outcome of the individual and the society as a whole and through education, there are various components that must be integrated and worked together. One such component plays a very prominent part in bringing the totality in the outcome of education. This very important component is the curriculum. The curriculum is the totality of learning experiences provided to students so that they can attain general skills and knowledge at a variety of learning sites (Marsh & Willis, 2003). Hence, curriculum is all the learning of students which is planned by and directed by the school to attain its educational goals (Tyler, 1949). The curriculum is the backbone of what is to be learned and experienced by the students with the help of the school facilitators to bring a holistic development of the students in the different school levels.

Making of a good curriculum requires great input from all the people concerned, during its development and various other important stages. The people who could give a maximum input to fabricating a great curriculum needs to have the capability to do it. Teachers who are teaching in the field are very important participants who could give firsthand knowledge and experience so that a great and need-based curriculum could be shaped. The skill of developing a good curriculum is also needed for the pre-service teachers so that when they go to the field of teaching and learning, they could apply the skill that they have been equipped with. Thus, the need and call to train the pre-service teachers in the same line is mandatory so that they are exposed to various stages of curriculum development and enhanced with the skill of making a great curriculum for the learners.
